

I have already been at the mercy of my local dail tone provider. That is why I have selected an independant ISP provider. I think that anything that increases competition, levels the playing feild and encourages market forces to act is good.

Please consider strongly letting as much competition as possible, when the "Bells" were broken up, we had a period of inovation in the telcom world that has not been repeated. We are on the verge of just such an explosion in the ISP services realm, let's let them strive to provide the services that consumers want.
